From an email, "It did look like the east face of Ramshorn Peak slid pretty recently. The blowing snow and clouds weren't conducive to good pictures but you can see the crown line below and to the right of the summit. Looked like a cornice fall triggered it." Photo: B. Richards

Advisory Region
Southern Gallatin
Longitude
-111.09W

Latitude
45.15N
Avalanche Details: Cornice triggered avalanche on Ramshorn Peak
Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Fri Mar 6, 2020
Southern Gallatin, 2020-03-05