
Reporting this from a friend of a friend. Not my photo, nor was I involved.

one skier got caught above large bottom cliff, carried all the way down over cliff to the apron. Said skier walked away completely unharmed. Not buried.

north face of that bowl, near cornrows.

Additional info from BSSP:

"There was a large, deep slab avalanche snowboard triggered in Lone Lake Cirque this afternoon. The slide ripped in a secondary start zone below ridgetop, and ran far into the flats, and may have run a bit uphill, where it encountered the rock glacier moraine in the runout. It looks to be a R4, D2.5."
