

GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Sun Dec 9, 2018

Good Morning. This is Alex Marienthal with the Gallatin National Forest Avalanche Forecast issued on Sunday, December 9th at 6:45 a.m. Today's forecast is sponsored by **Knoff Group Real Estate** and **Lawson Dental**. This forecast does not apply to operating ski areas.

Mountain Weather

This morning temperatures are in the teens F, the mountains have no new snow, and wind is westerly at 10-20 mph. Today will be mostly sunny with temperatures in the high 20s to low 30s F and wind out of the west to southwest at 10-20 mph. The next chance for snow is Tuesday morning.

Snowpack and Avalanche Discussion

Bridger Range   Gallatin Range   Madison Range   Lionhead Range   Cooke City

The snowpack in the Bridger, Gallatin and Madison Ranges, and mountains near Cooke City is 2-3 feet deep and generally stable without widespread buried weak layers. Near West Yellowstone, the snowpack is 1-2 feet deep, sugary and weak (**video**). Check out our **recent videos** and **snowpit profiles** on our website for a snapshot of the snowpack structure across our advisory area.

Reports of avalanches last week were confined to small slides of new and wind-drifted snow (**Avalanche Activity**). Today will be the fifth day in a row without new snow or heavy wind-loading, and avalanches are unlikely to be triggered. On Friday, ice climbers in Hyalite triggered a small pocket of wind-drifted snow (**photo**). Similar small wind slabs might be found today. Blowing and drifting snow or cracking of the snow surface are signs that you might find unstable fresh drifts. Assess wind-loaded slopes for the consequences of being caught in even a small slide. Today, the avalanche danger is rated **LOW**.
